Paul Donna, representative from Northland Securities, spoke to Council regarding the refunding bonds. Mr. Donna provided a summary of the bond sale and a report from Standard and Poor's and spoke first regarding the city's rating. Tom Dankert has had a conference call with Standard and Poor's last week regarding our credit rating. He provided information outside of the norm, such as the local area economy and our various financial practices. The City has received a AA- rating, which is an upgrade from our previous A1 rating. Standard and Poor's views Austin that serves as a regional center. There is ample employment, and income and wealth levels were also evaluated. The company is very impressed with the city's reserve levels, as well as the very low debt levels. The credit rating report was very good news; the city has good policies in place. The refunding is for three outstanding bonds. Bids came in much better than what was presented in early August, partly due to the current market and partly due to the city's credit rating. Cronin and Co. offered the best bid of three at 3.09%, this is compared to the 3.49% as what was originally presented in August. The net benefit savings to the City is $172,961.10. Since a premium bid was received, Cronin and Co. offered more cash than we had bonds outstanding. The excess premium will be used to reduce the debt issuance from $1,275,000 to $1,250,000.

Moved by Council Member Austin, seconded by Council Member McAlister, adopting a resolution issuing General Obligation Refunding Bonds, Series 2009A. 7-0. Carried.
